Blaze Richard Bachman

Blaze is a novel by American writer Stephen King, published under the pseudonym of Richard Bachman. King announced on his website that he "found it" in an attic. In fact (as mentioned in the afterword of Different Seasons) it was written before Carrie and King offered the original draft of the novel to his Doubleday publishers at the same time as 'Salem's Lot.

Stephen King | Blaze

Blaze was published long after poor Richard Bachman's unexpected demise. The Forward, written by Stephen King, explains just how this novel went from a draft written by Bachman (and/or a much younger Stephen King) as a crime novel was eventually transformed into what we see in the published form.

Blaze - by Richard Bachman - Book of Jen

An early "trunk novel" that's been pruned of its young author's overly sentimental leanings, Richard Bachman's Blaze was published 35 years after its original inception in the early seventies. Now that it's showing up on the remainder tables alongside Patricia Cornwall's ongoing attempts to erase every last slice of reader loyalty we once held for Kay Scarpetta, it's a good time to check out ...

Book Review: Blaze by Richard Bachman | Blogcritics

Stephen King admits up front that the newly published Blaze is a trunk novel: his introduction describes how he wrote Blaze in the early '70s (the "period of greatest productivity" for his intermittent pseudonym Richard Bachman, which he therefore revives here) and then rejected it, boxed it up, and set it aside. Recently, he revived the book, rewriting it "fast, never looking ahead or ...

That's How We Roll. Reviewed by Linda L. Richards. I hadn't intended on reviewing Blaze, Richard Bachman's posthumous novel. Not because it isn't a good book -- I pretty much knew that it would be -- but because, on a certain level, there's just no point in reviewing a novel by Stephen King or, as is the case here, a novel closely associated with him.
