Peripheral nerve blocks (PNB) are an established and effective method for providing post-operative analgesia. They can also be used as the sole anaesthetic technique for some operations. A successful nerve block results from placing the right drug in the right place. A peripheral nerve block can be achieved as a result of placing

Peripheral Nerve Blocks versus Periarticular Injection As mentioned above, ACBs have become more popular due to equivalent pain control and decreased motor blockade when compared with FNBs. [1] Periarticular injections are also being used more frequently as part of a multimodal pain

Similarly, the risk-benefit ratio of analgesic peripheral nerve blocks and fascial plane blocks should be evaluated on a case-by-case basis. If the block is performed under general anaesthesia and requires repositioning of the patient, there is a risk of tracheal tube disconnection or dislodgement.
